COUGAR TOWN?

Bears, wolves and other beasts popping up in the Chicago area

Chicago Tribune

Coyotes took some getting used to as their numbers grew in the Chicago area and people grudgingly learned to accept an animal that still seems just a little too wild for suburban streets.

Now, wildlife experts are predicting bigger animals—bears, cougars and even wolves—may be at the gate and ready to test the limits of just how much wildlife people in a metropolitan area will tolerate in their backyards.

All three species are well-established in neighboring states, and their territorial nature means their numbers and range are likely to grow as they search for food and other necessities, said Stan Gehrt, who studied coyotes in the Chicago area for 12 years.

“Coyotes forced people in communities to start addressing the issue of larger predators,” said Gehrt, an associate professor of environment and natural resources at Ohio State University. “Society will determine what their level of acceptance is going to be and they’ll draw the lines.”

There have been several recent cougar sightings in the northern suburbs, though none has been confirmed. In 2008, however, one of the big cats was shot by police in an alley on Chicago’s North Side.

Bears and wolves also have made their way into Illinois in the past decade or so. According to a recently completed survey by the Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, seven gray wolves, three cougars and two black bears have been spotted in Illinois since 2000.

Wolves travel south from Wisconsin, where they are well-established, and black bears live in Wisconsin and Missouri. Cougars found in Illinois can be traced to the Black Hills in South Dakota, wildlife experts said.

Coyotes have for years been common around Chicago but still don’t always fit in so well. A pack of six coyotes killed a 15-month-old Yorkshire terrier that belonged to Sue Reid’s daughter in the family’s Wheaton backyard in late September, Reid said.

Reid said she hasn’t allowed her 13-year-old daughter,

Kendall, to play in their backyard since the attack, which also left the family’s second dog badly injured.

“She has not been out of this house without one of us since it happened,” Reid said. “I believe animals have a right to live. I just think there’s something that needs to be done so that they don’t kill an animal.”

Successful conservation efforts and strict hunting regulations in nearby states have allowed species such as the gray wolf to rebound from near extinction, said Eric Hellgren, director of the Cooperative Wildlife Research Lab at SIU.

Last year, the Obama administration removed gray wolves in the Great Lakes region from the federal endangered species list. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service counted 782 gray wolves in Wisconsin in 2010, compared with just 83 in 1985, and the state’s first modern-era wolf hunt will begin Oct. 15.

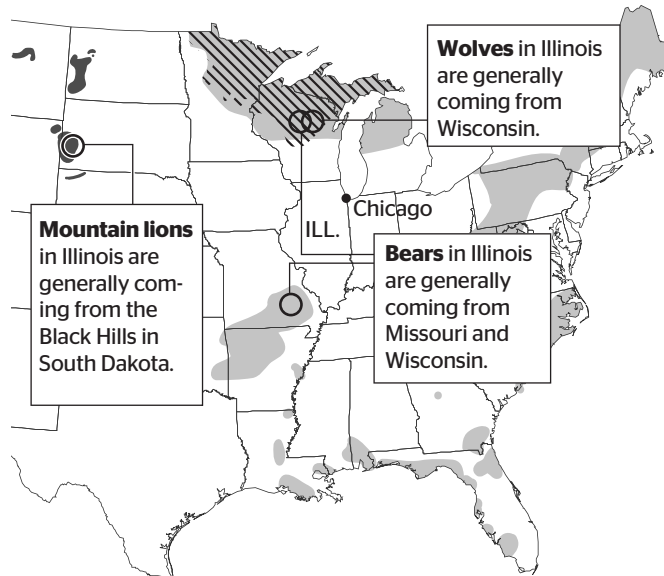

Illinois still classifies gray wolves as a threatened species, which makes them illegal to kill. Black bears and cougars, also known as mountain lions, aren’t protected by the state.

Incoming carnivores

Researchers suggest that larger animals may soon follow an increased coyote population in Illinois. There have been a few sightings of these animals since 2000.

It's not vacation without fighting

Jen Kim

redeye@tribune.com
@thisjenkim

Yes, it's all coming back to me now as my mom unsuccessfully tries to calm down my dad, who is yelling his head off about a too-hot jalapeno sauce. My brother is hysterically laughing, which further infuriates my father. My sister is trying and failing to discreetly pick up after the dog, who decided to do a No. 2 on the restaurant patio. My head is in my hands, and I don't know whether to laugh or cry.

"Ah, this is what family vacations are like," I remember sadly.

This may be the reason it has been approximately 15 years since our last family vacation, back when my siblings and I were fresh teenagers, still unable to escape the confines of mobile family time, no matter how traumatizing the circumstances.

Why was it that each trip, no matter the locale or distance, would always result in screaming and tears (and occasionally vomit)? From a simple day trip to Disneyland to a weeklong jaunt to the Grand Canyon, no vacation resembled those experienced by the all-American Tanner family on "Full House."

Growing up, I always had expected to become that sitcom family. You know, life lessons solved in 30 minutes (minus commercial breaks), a really annoying neighbor who provided daily comic relief and family vacations where everyone was too drunk on their love for each other to notice how cheesy it all was.

My parents never watched these shows. Technically, my siblings and I weren't allowed to either, because TV was forbidden except for the occasional PBS documentary. Perhaps that is why we never took the right vacations—because my parents did not have the role models we had.

Now, more than a decade later, my L.A.-based family has taken a plane ride to visit me. They even brought my beloved dog, an 8-year-old Maltese who can scream and yelp like no other. (Well, maybe like my dad.)

Immediately it becomes clear that bringing the dog is a bad idea because we realize our trip will be limited to outdoor seating and public parks. My mother is allergic to everything. My brother hates being outside. And my dad hates the dog.

Still, how difficult can it be? It will be only 48 hours together.

They are also meeting my live-in boyfriend, who has never spent more than half an afternoon with either of my parents. They immediately greet him in Korean and continue to converse with him in Korean throughout the rest of the trip. They must know he does not speak or understand a word of their native tongue (except the bad words I taught him long ago). I am baffled that his blond hair and green eyes don't give that away.

Still, we manage to trek through. A misfit family and a dog—fighting, screaming, barking and sneezing along the way.

You can almost hear the laugh track in the distance.

Wacker work's end of the road

After a decade of ongoing construction, project getting finishing touches

Chicago Tribune

Construction on the last leg of Wacker Drive ends in late December, capping a decade-long effort to modernize and rehabilitate the historic double-deck boulevard.

Only a handful of projects remain, such as finishing bridge work from Adams to Van Buren streets as well as landscaping and some electrical work at the Congress Parkway Interchange, said Mary Ellen Mack, a construction supervisor with the Illinois Department of Transportation.

At a preview tour Thursday, Gov. Quinn stopped at three sites along Wacker Drive, touting the project's on-time schedule as he met and thanked construction workers. He said he anticipates that the newly constructed Wacker will last at least 100 years.

As he stood outside the Civic Opera House, Quinn said Wacker Drive needed a "fundamental overhaul" because it's a vital thoroughfare.

About 66,000 vehicles travel Wacker Drive daily, and 140,000 pedestrians, most coming from area train stations, walk along

WHAT ARE THE PERKS?

Some of the project's features include a higher ceiling on a widened Lower Wacker Drive, 15-foot sidewalks on Upper Wacker Drive and fewer vehicle entrances to improve safety. Ramps along the Congress Interchange now are partially underground, while above the ramps sit a three-acre park with walking paths, benches and a dog-friendly area.

its sidewalks, according to IDOT.

The governor said he's a big fan of Lower Wacker Drive, which he calls the "eighth wonder of the world."

"You want to get through Chicago, take Lower Wacker and tell your neighbor how to do it," Quinn said.

Around 2001, crews reconstructed the east-west section of Wacker Drive, from Michigan Avenue to Randolph Street, for about $223 million, said Tony Quigley, IDOT's acting engineer of project implementation.

Under the $303 million project that launched in April 2010, crews have rebuilt the Congress Parkway Interchange and rehabbed Upper and Lower Wacker Drive from Randolph Street to Congress Boulevard.

CTA unveils rehab plan for Wilson stop

By Tracy Swartz

REDEYE

The CTA on Thursday unveiled its plans for the ailing Wilson station, the three time winner of Going Public's annual Crust Station contest that dishonors the most disgusting CTA stop.

Wilson will be transformed into a transfer station for Purple Line trains. The station, which was built in 1923, also will see new glass and steel canopies, a glass-enclosed entrance along Wilson Avenue and a new entrance for Sunnyside Avenue.

The station's terra cotta exterior also will be restored, the CTA said.

Construction on the $203 million project is anticipated to begin before mid-2013 and continue through 2015. The project is being paid for with state and federal funds and tax-increment financing, money intended to promote redevelopment in certain areas in the city.

A meeting about the project will be held 6-8 p.m. Oct. 11, at Harry S. Truman College, 1145 W. Wilson Ave.

Even if you're not running the Chicago Marathon, you might want to plug in

By Zara Husaini | REDEYE

Here's some music to a runner's ears: Those tunes you listen to actually can help keep you going.

"When you hit a wall, it motivates you," said Amanda Pezzullo, personal training manager at Equinox in the Gold Coast.

Pezzullo, a former gymnast who began running about six years ago, said running plugged-in isn't for everyone, and high-performance runners sometimes prefer to focus on how their bodies feel. But for others, it can be the perfect way to quiet the pain of running.

As 45,000 people descend on Chicago this weekend for the 35th annual Chicago Marathon, many will be running with their buds—ear buds, that is. Organizers changed a policy in 2009 to allow runners to use headphones, iPods and similar devices.

"The thing about running with music is, it makes you feel like you aren't working as hard," said Nancy Fudacz, director of person-

10 GREAT RUNNING SONGS

RedEye's Sound Board picks a few tracks to keep you on track with your running routine.

Higher Ground

Red Hot Chili Peppers (1)

I love the Stevie Wonder original, but this remake is perfect for running, and it too (like "B.O.B.") ends in a crazy flurry of noise that pushes me to my fullest. And, yes, I first heard it in the movie "Center Stage."

—DANAKAVAN

Tell Em

Sleigh Bells (2)

It's basically like having a pack of cheerleaders flanking your sides for three minutes. Some of us need all the encouragement we can get.

—JESSICA GALLIART

45:33

LCD Soundsystem (3)

LCD Soundsystem made this running "song" like five years ago. Tailor-made for running. It has warm up and cool down. It's great. Back when I actually did physical exercise, I used it consistently.

—REX CHIEKAL

Circles

Incubus (4)

Much of "Morning View" offers a great opportunity to blow off some steam, and "Circles" in particular is all swirling guitars and lyrical catharsis, anger converted into peace. Hasn't everyone gone to the gym for that reason at one point or another? —MATTPAIS

Metatron

The Mars Volta (5)

Pretty much all of "The Bedlam in Goliath," like most Mars Volta albums, is certifiably bonkers, indulging in often-incomprehensible lyrics and slithering arrangements that rarely settle down. That's part of why I love its outrageous energy, which makes "Metatron" and many more songs on the record perfect for working it. —MP.

You Think I Ain't Worth A Dollar, But I Feel Like a Millionaire

Queens of the Stone Age (6)

The first 30-40 seconds give you some time to warm up. Then you better get ready to sprint as QOTSA cranks a song that almost makes you wish you were being chased, so all that adrenaline could go to a purpose more specific and survivalist than your workout. —MP.

LIST

al training at East Bank Club in River North. Fudacz said that listening to music can drop a person's perceived exertion rate by 10 percent. Music can eclipse the sounds of heavy breathing and hard footsteps.

Registered dietitian Melissa Joy Dobbins uses music to get fired up when she runs. The former ballet dancer is used to pushing her body, but she only began running recently. Dobbins completed her seventh 5K last month, and she's a fan of listening while running. She says the music also can be a great way for runners to maintain a pace, and that some runners choose to listen to the same song on repeat to maintain a constant speed.

Research suggests that listening to faster music can increase an athlete's speed. A 2009 Research Institute for Sport and Exercise Science at John Moores University study focused on 12 male cyclists who were asked to pedal at a rate of their own choosing.

When researchers sped up the music, they found, the participants covered a greater distance per unit of time.

But just like the decision of whether to listen while running, the matter of song selection is very personal. Dobbins said there's one song that always gets her energy level up: "Born to Hand Jive" from "Grease." Pezzullo prefers house or pop music from artists like Avicii or Deadmau5 because the beats of those songs complement her strides. But frenetic pacing may not always be the way to go: Fudacz acknowledges that marathons can be nerve-racking, and she said sometimes calming music helps.

Listening to music may be the best way to make a hard workout seem more bearable: It's motivating, distracting and energizing; it may even push you to work harder without trying. Pezzullo said any fitness class takes on a new tone and atmosphere with the help of the right music. But runners should keep in mind that exercising with headphones isn't without drawbacks. It's important to maintain an awareness of what's going on, both in the body and externally.

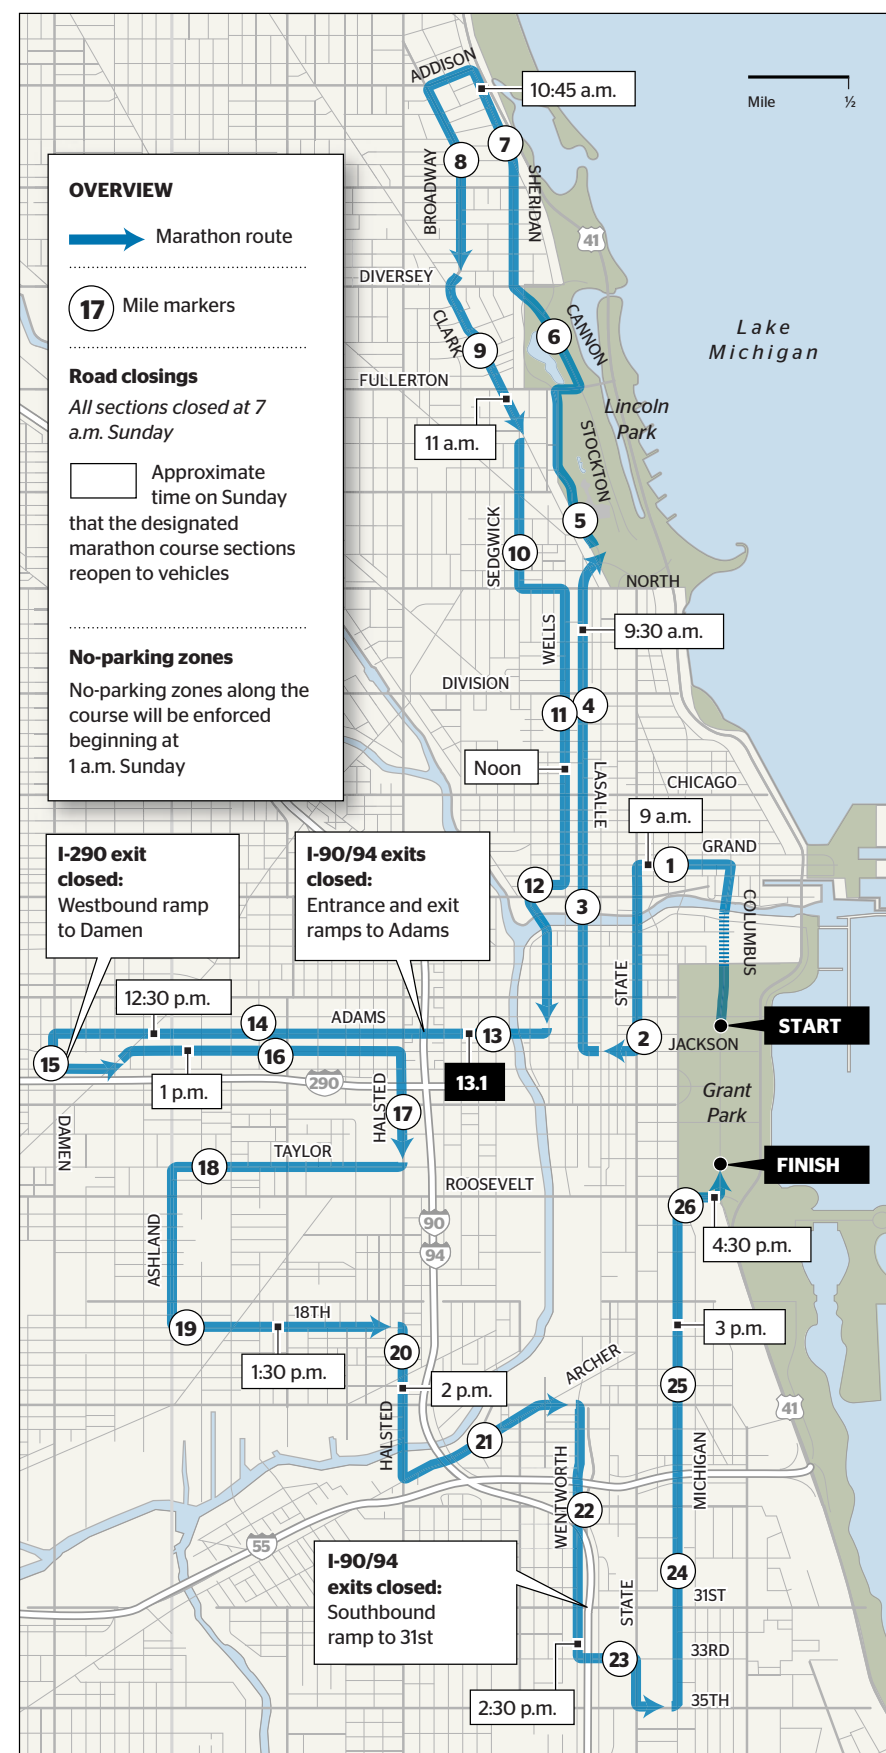

Marathon runners may be allowed to listen to music, but they also should be able to hear ambulances, announcements and the crowd. After all, there's no reason to drown out the sound of a cheering crowd.

B.O.B.

Outkast (7)

I pull this song out when I'm finishing a long run, and it never fails to leave me sprinting for the finish line. The up-tempo tune starts strong and never wanes, but the repetition at the end of it is what makes it the best workout song ever.

—D.K.

Jump Man

Buckethead (8)

It's fast-paced and—bonus—packed with Bootsy Collins reciting some famous Michael Jordan quotes: "I can never stop workin' hard. Each day I feel I have to improve." If MJ can do it, so can you.

—BRIAN MOORE

Everlong

Foo Fighters (9)

Its driving rhythm never ceases for the full five minutes of the song, and when Dave Grohl gets to that part where he screams, "When I sing along with you," you just feel like running through a wall. But don't. It'll hurt.

—B.M.

D is for Dangerous

Arctic Monkeys (10)

That frisky bass line gets me every time. The song builds perfectly, so even when it cools off a little it's still on fire. Then when the entire band charges to the finish, you feel like you can keep going just a little longer, legs, muscles and whatever else be damned.

Big Bird getting the pink slip? Not quite Wednesday's presidential debate touched on Main Street. But what about Sesame Street?

Republican candidate Mitt Romney said he would stop subsidizing PBS, the public broadcasting TV network that airs "Sesame Street" and the British hits "Downton Abbey" and "Sherlock," not to mention "Upstairs, Downstairs," "Call the Midwife" and numerous other TV favorites.

"I like PBS, I love Big Bird. Actually like you [moderator Jim Lehrer], too. But I'm not going to—I'm not going to keep on spending money on things to borrow money from China to pay for," Romney said.

But it turns out Big Bird's neck is not on the chopping block. The Sesame Workshop issued a statement Thursday.

If you're buying groceries for the week, duh, you're fine. But if you're doing retail therapy because you're bored or had a bad day at work, remind yourself of that.

DO I NEED THIS?

Having a wish list is cool, but think about bigger goals (say, saving money every month) and things you really need (like books for school or gas to get to work). If what you're buying comes at the cost of either, it's not worth it.

HOW WILL I PAY?

A study found that people who use debit or credit cards are more likely to make impulse purchases. Maybe swear off plastic and use cash only when it comes to buying something not on your "need" list.

WHAT IF I WAIT?

Before you head to the register, wait a few hours. More often than not, you'll walk away and forget about the item. If it's still on your mind a day or week later, it might be time to buy.

HOW DO I FEEL?

Almost everybody gets excited about an amazing deal, but if you're buying more often than not to fill a void, consider whether you're actually meeting other needs by impulse spending.

WILL I WANT TO RETURN IT?

Not all retailers give out refunds, some do only store credit. Plus, if you bought it online, you might be out shipping costs.

How to kiss your bank goodbye

YOUNG MONEY

Megan Crepeau

■ mcrepeau@tribune.com
■ @crepeau

I'm going to take a wild guess and say that you don't love your bank. Maybe you're "meh" on it. Maybe you don't think about it much at all. Or maybe—and nobody would blame you—you just plain hate it. You've hit one ATM fee or misrouted direct deposit too many, and you want to vote with your feet. If that sounds familiar, it may be time to switch banks.

I'll be honest with you: It's going to be a pain in the ass. Here are a few suggestions to make things easier.

■ Do your research. Don't just go for the flashiest ad campaign or the bank next door. Think about your specific needs—if you travel a lot, you're going to need a comprehensive online banking setup and a checking account that will reverse ATM fees. If savings are important to you, find a bank with sweet interest rates. And we're all looking for that Prince Charming bank with low or no debit card fees.

■ Consider going to a credit union. They're more independent and more locally focused. Instead of taking your money and investing it for profit, like a bank does, membership in a credit union is like owning a share of that credit union. Generally, they offer lower fees and better interest rates, but less flexibility and fewer perks. Check out www.mycreditunion.gov to find one near you.

■ Talk to a real person, face-to-face. This is the most important rule. You absolutely should not do this online or over the phone. Going to your bank to close accounts in person gives you the most control. In person, your old bank might make you a counter-offer or sweeten the deal to keep your business. Being there physically is the best way to make sure you understand everything involved.

■ Don't be hasty. Leave a cushion of money in your old bank account for a few months, just in case you have old checks floating around or your direct deposit accounts take awhile to catch up.

Once you're sure that your new account is running smoothly, resist the urge to get all your money out in a briefcase full of cash. You're not James Bond. Get a cashier's check or just write yourself a check. Once it's in your new account, you're home free. Congrats.

Celebrating RedEye's greatest hits

TOP TEN CRAZY CHARACTERS

SUDOKU NINJA

When RedEye introduced the Sudoku puzzle to Chicago in 2005, we gave it an equally intimidating mascot.

SOX HAND & CUBS HAND

Didn't like these characters? Talk to the hands.

WHIZZER

The prognosticating pooch has been picking winners (and eating RedEye table scraps) since 2002.

P. TATER

Before the Show Patrol TV column, there was a potato with eyes on it. A ... couch potato!

WEATHER GUY & WEATHER GIRL

Because every forecast needs a steely gaze.

EVIL SUPERCOMPUTER

No one's really sure where this dude came from. Wait, was he a bad guy on "The Matrix"?

BURGERELLI

Here's an excerpt from his first RedEye column in 2008: "I, the Great Burgerelli, am a fearless seeker of fine burgers. I have no patience for simple hot dogs. Chicken sandwiches bore me. And don't even get me started on Italian beef. It's only burgers for me, the Great Burgerelli!"

STICK FIGURE

He's so sweet and innocent ... except for that one week he experimented with steroids. That was frightening.

BAG BOY

There's actually a living, breathing guy who writes this column, but he's never been identified. He wears the bag because he's ashamed to be a Chicago sports fan.

RITA REDEYE

She's received more letters and phone calls over the years than some staff members, so for the record: Rita is not a real person. Guess that's what happens when you invent a character to solicit reader feedback.

MAD MONDAYS

LOVIE'S BEARS THRIVE
UNDER 'MNF' LIGHTS—
AND THE WEEK AFTER

By Jack M Silverstein | FOR REDEYE

A cynic would describe Sunday's Bears game against Jacksonville in two words: trap game. The symptoms are there: the Bears get hyped for a "Monday Night Football" road showdown, they drop 34 points on the NFL's top-ranked defense, then they go into Jacksonville and lay an egg. Maybe. Fortunately for the Bears, they're coached by Lovie Smith, who is 8-2 on Monday nights and 7-2 the game after. Let's look at some of Smith's finest moments on Mondays and the games that followed.

Smith's first "Monday Night Football" game as Bears coach taught the world an important lesson: The Bears are who we thought they were! The epic comeback win pushed these Super Bowl contenders to 6-0. Two weeks later, after the bye, the Bears squashed the 49ers.

The Bears stormed into St. Louis with the NFC's best record, and they left with a win behind Devin Hester's—count 'em—TWO kickoff return touchdowns. Then they blew a 24-3 second-half lead at home against the 3-10 Buccaneers, eking out an overtime win.

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION

What's the total length of field goals made by the Bears in the 2010 and 2011 seasons in nautical miles?

Bearing Down with...

HENRY MELTON

Everything's bigger in Texas—including the groups of Bears fans

By Jack M Silverstein | FOR REDEYE

"Monday Night Football" is a big deal for NFL players. And when the game is played less than 20 miles from your high school, you're bound to feel extra excitement. That was the case Monday for Bears defensive tackle Henry Melton. The native of Grapevine, Texas, spoke with RedEye about Bears fans at Cowboys Stadium and roughing up Tony Romo.

What was it like in Dallas with all the Bears fans there?

You could see all the Bears fans when we were coming in. It looked like a Bears tailgate out there. I was really surprised. I think a lot of Bears fans just moved down south to get away from the weather. [Laughs.]

There were a couple times when I was on the field on defense where I was pumping up the crowd like I was at home. You'll see me on film pumping up the crowd at an away game, you know? [Laughs.] I felt like half the stadium at least was Bears fans.

You had two big plays: the sack, and the, um [pauses] the Briggs ...

Sack.

On the inter- ...

No. Sack. It was a sack.

It looked like a sack.

It was. It will come back a sack.

So take me through the sack-sack.

It was just a little stunt that me and Shea [McClellin] put on. The key was that Romo does a little spin out—he turns his back to you and tries to spin away. You're not supposed to be expecting that he's going to spin out. You're supposed to completely miss him. But we've been scouting that all week on film. So I just tried to stay up on his upper right shoulder for when he was going to spin out, and he happened to run right into me.

And the Briggs touchdown?

I gotta give compliments to the guys, because I came in on third down on that drive. I was a little fatigued, so I took first and second down off, and then I came back in to get a good rush. Amobi [Okoye] and P [Julius Peppers] let me do that.

I honestly didn't know what happened. I hit his arm and I just felt the ball pop out. I didn't know if he'd shoveled it or if I ripped it out, but going back to film, I popped it out of his hands. I looked up and saw Briggs catch it, and he just blew by me. I felt the breeze and everything. And then I just put my hands up. I knew it was a touchdown.

Yeah, he had a little shake getting around ...

Oh man, he was gone. I mean, we've seen him running on the field sideline to sideline, but when he had that ball in his hand, he hit another gear. That was the backbreaker. That hurt 'em. They just got a turnover, and they were going to try to go in and make it a game. And then that happened and I lost my mind. All I knew is that we pretty much had the game under control.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR JACK M SILVERSTEIN COVERS THE BEARS FOR REDEYE. SAY HEY @READJACK.

Just like that, Sox vanish

SACKED AGAIN

Bag Boy

» redeyesports@tribune.com

Good times for the Bears, but we must do some police work first. Time to go all "CSI" on the White Sox.

It's a funny thing. If a team blows a three-game lead on Sept. 18, but there's no one there to witness it, how do we know it happened?

Shame on you, you lazy, apathetic, uninterested White Sox fans of which I am a card-carrying member. I wasn't there, but I'm wondering at which point Ken Harrelson went stone cold silent.

Here's the worst part. It's not like that was a great beginning. Nope. If anything, that window has closed. What an amazing run!

A.J. Pierzynski—likely gone. I am not seeing them paying up for him, and he's done with hometown discounts.

Jake Peavy—it's like a $20 million option on him for next year. Um, do you have anything cheaper? I say that a lot at jewelry stores, but that's another story.

Paulie is Paulie—but he's closer to 40 now. Uh, there's like a $9 million option on Gavin Floyd. Pass.

Kevin Youkilis, gosh I love him, but do you pay up to keep him? I have no idea. It's not my money and there isn't any money thanks to you (us?) apathetic fans!

Sadly, this team is the best we have because up North, it's your 101-loss Chicago Cubs!

61-101. That is hard to do. So let's push things back a bit. Instead of the two- to four-year plan by Theo Epstein, I think this needs to be adjusted to roughly a 15-year plan, to be safe. Lots can happen in 15 years, and we may even have a functioning government by then! Yay! Human beings, you know I love 'em!

OK, some good news. Mike Tice hasn't grown a brain, and the Bears lead the NFC North. Pouty Faced Jay, however, has grown into snot-faced Jay and throws hissy fits on the sidelines.

He does remind me of a 4-year-old, so when he gets like that, trainers, listen up: He just needs a juice box with a little straw. He'll be fine.

1 What will Jay Cutler say to Maurice Jones-Drew on Sunday?	"I said I'd be right back."	"Hey, Mo, do you know the difference between 'quitting' and 'holding out'? Exactly."	Sometime late in the fourth quarter: "Scoreboard."	"I LOVE your pantsuit, where did you get it?"	"People with three names are usually women."
2 Who said this: "I get enough of me sometimes, too?"	Jay Cutler. Though after last season's injury, you'd think he'd have a hands-off approach.	Jerry Jones, Justin Bieber, Ozzie Guillen, iPhone 5 complaints, Facebook and Honey Boo Boo.	Bobby Frenkel, Vermont's record-holder for toenail eating?	Me when I'm pretending to be you. You're so vain. I bet you think this answer's about you.	Mike Tice, but we all feel that way after eating chili and drinking beer, don't we?
3 Tell us something about the Jacksonville Jaguars.	I'm against broadcasting it, but we Floridians are not used to seeing Jax in a box.	The Jacksonville Jaguar is not half as frightening as the Miami Beach Cougar.	They'll win Super Bowl XLIX in 2015. They will be called the L.A. Jaguars then.	Four men named Jackson have played for them: Chevis, Grady, Lenie and Willie. True story.	Their mascot is named Jaxson de Ville. And they're owned by U. of I. grad Shahid Khan.
4 Instead of fines, what should be the penalty for flopping in the NBA?	I think they should keep charging them.	You have to be in the next movie starring Taylor Kitsch ("John Carter," "Savages," "Battleship").	Mandatory Kardashian marriage for multiple offenders.	The players have to put their money in responsible investments.	You should be forced to watch like 18 hours of ... NBA basketball. Too mean?
5 If you were an NHL player, what would you do during the lockout?	Something "Cutting Edge."	Make up useless puns: "What kind of hockey do they play in Chicago? Blackhawky."	There's a perfect "Office Space" quote to use here, but it's a family newspaper.	Return to my first love: Mr. T celebrity impersonator.	I would find the prettiest girl I know and try and you know ... kiss her.

Jail cell! Who needs a jail cell?!

What's sadder than the Cubs season? Three people trying to scalp tickets outside Wrigley Field when brokers were selling them for under a dollar.

Raymond Ferguson, 48, of the 1600 block of West Lake Street; Anthony Wakefield, 52, of the 1300 block of West Van Buren Street; and Meredith Nathaniel, 42, of the 6500 block of South Francisco Avenue, were cited for selling tickets near an amusement park without a valid broker's license, police said. The three were spotted by police near Wrigley on Tuesday, holding tickets and shouting, "Who needs Cubs tickets?" police said.

Tickets for the Cubs final three games of the season against Houston were listed for less than $1 apiece on StubHub.

Summitt: I was forced out

Former Tennessee women's basketball coach Pat Summitt, who won more games than any other college men's or women's coach, said in an affidavit filed Wednesday that she was forced to step aside last spring after being diagnosed with dementia. In the affidavit, Summitt, 60, said she did not choose to step aside but was told by athletic director Dave Hart on March 14 that she would not be head coach the next season.

THE DIGIT*$50K-$100K

That's how much Curt Schilling could get for selling his famous bloody sock, according to Richie Russek of the Westhampton, N.Y.-based Grey Flannel Auctions, espn.com said. The former major league pitcher's 38 Studios video game company filed for bankruptcy in June.

"I want to be true to myself. ... I want to try to be the best role model I can be for kids who might look into boxing as a sport and a professional career. I have and will always be a proud Puerto Rican. I have always been and always will be a proud gay man."

Point your compass North to explore Uptown's 6 new restaurants and bars

By Lisa Arnett

REDEYE

In the past year, Uptown has been in the news for everything from Wilson Red Line station renovations to celeb chef Bobby Flay filming at the Green Mill. Though beloved fast-food chain Sonic Drive-In hasn't committed to opening its first Chicago location there yet, this North Side neighborhood has seen plenty of new bars and restaurants take up residence since the start of 2012. Consider this your to-do list the next time you're in the neighborhood. LMARNETT@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEETAS

The Reservoir
LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE PHOTOS

The Reservoir

844 W. Montrose Ave.
773-275-4000

Opened in: September
Uptown's latest watering hole is all about craft beer, with drafts such as The Lost Abbey Red Barn and Lagunitas Little Sumpin' Sumpin' ales at the ready. There's also something special for cocktail fans too: Look for a handful of twisted classes to rotate seasonally. Right now, choices include a traditional pisco sour, Pimm's cup made with ginger beer and a blood orange sidecar made with Italian blood orange liqueur. To eat, shareable plates range from mussels cooked in Metropolitan Krankshaft kolsh to braised pork belly with poached apple and parsnip puree.

Razon 4250 N. Marine Drive 773-880-9115

Opened in: May

Even though Razon has been open for four months, the tucked-away location inside Imperial Towers has kept it relatively hidden to those who don't live in the building. The dinner menu features cheese plates sourced from Pastoral as well as hearty dishes such as pulled pork with barbecue-glazed pears or polenta with mushroom ragu. Deals such as a $10 grass-fed beef burger and duck-fat fries and $25 three-course dinner Wednesdays sound worth the trip.

Baker & Nosh 1301 W. Wilson Ave. 773-989-7393

Opened in: January

Le Cordon Bleu chef instructor Bill Millholland's bakery and cafe has been going strong since opening at the tail end of January. Next week, the menu adjusts to welcome autumnal flavors such as spicy pumpkin or carrot-ginger-raisin coffee cake, plus the return of cold-weather customer favorites such as a roast beef sandwich. A rustic fruit tart with ricotta, dried figs, pine nuts and honey also is set to debut soon. Millholland continues to offer his basic bread-baking and croissant-making classes that launched in July; find details on dates and rates at bakerandnosh.com.

Pecking Order

4416 N. Clark St. 773-907-9900

Opened in: June

After a summer of settling into its farm-fresh space, chef Kristine Subido's chicken-centric cafe welcomes a flock of new features for fall. Within the past month, she's launched Sunday brunch as well as weekday lunch. Brunch highlights include her take on fried chicken and waffles with house-made coconut jam and sriracha-black pepper butter, as well as a Longaniza sausage burger topped with a fried egg and toasted garlic mayo. Cooler weather brings new seasonal dishes such as braised greens with bacon, coconut and ginger (replacing summer's popular corn salad) as well as two new fall punches—featuring ingredients such as bourbon, apple cider and metaxa, a Greek herbal liqueur—set to debut by next weekend. And delivery service starts Tuesday, so you'll still be able to get your chicken fix even when it's too chilly to leave your nest.

Lao Sze Chuan 4832 N. Broadway 773-293-4653

Opened in: September

Chef Tony Hu has a fleet of Chinatown restaurants, but he's probably best known for his first, Lao Sze Chuan. It's been serving traditional Szechuan cuisine since the late '90s, and now Hu has taken the concept north and opened a second Chicago location in the former Marigold storefront. The massive menu is about 90 percent the same as the Chinatown original, but the space itself resembles flashier sibling restaurant Lao You Ju with its plush red banquettes and candlelit tables. You can count on popular picks such as tea-smoked duck, dry chili chicken and crispy lemon shrimp, and though hot-pot cooking at your table isn't offered here, you can order it already prepared.

Miso Asian Kitchen 4449 N. Broadway 773-728-4449

Opened in: March

This Pan-Asian restaurant has seating for 10 but does a swift business in carryout. Chinese takeout classics such as orange chicken and crab rangoon are most popular, but the menu includes Japanese, Vietnamese and Korean specialties. That means plenty of tuna and salmon donburri (rice bowls), beef bibimbap, chicken gyoza and maki to go around.

'Frankenweenie'

Burton's back

Director gives a stop-motion jolt to his original short film

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» mpais@tribune.com
» @mattpais

A Disney movie preceded by commercials for new Disney Channel efforts "Girl vs. Monster" and "Dog with a Blog" doesn't suggest the studio's overflowing with innovative ideas. Especially when the movie, "Frankenweenie," finds director Tim Burton returning to a tale he already told in 1984—albeit now through 3-D, stop-motion animation and extending a half-hour story to feature length.

What a relief, then, that the new, black-and-white "Frankenweenie" springs to life with more inspiration than Burton, lately on auto-pilot with efforts like "Dark Shadows" and "Alice in Wonderland," has offered in years. In the original "Frankenweenie," Victor Frankenstein (Barret Oliver) had friends. Now the young science whiz (voiced by Charlie Tahan of "Charlie St. Cloud") doesn't, but he still uses electricity—in the form of lightning this time—to revive his beloved pooch Sparky after the little guy chases a baseball into the street and gets hit by a car. Post-reanimation, Sparky's elaborate stitching makes him look somewhat like a baseball himself, save for the bolts in his neck.

This four-legged salute to Mary Shelley's classic story clearly was destined for animated re-imagining, allowing for oddities like Mr. Whiskers. He's a cat who, according to his glassy-eyed young owner (voiced by Catherine O'Hara, who also tackles Victor's mom and a gym teacher), dreams about a person whenever something big is about to happen to them. Martin Landau (an Oscar winner for Burton's "Ed Wood") brilliantly voices science teacher Mr. Rzykruski, who looks and sounds a lot scarier than he is.

Even at an hour longer, "Frankenweenie" remains small. Nodding to "Bride of Frankenstein," "Godzilla" and more, frequent Burton collaborator John August's script generates more smiles than laughs.

The movie's still a better, sweeter entry point for talking to youngsters about death than "The Odd Life of Timothy Green," even if "Frankenweenie" should come with a note saying, "Do not try this at home." Credit Burton for inadvertently inspiring some now-scientifically inclined kids to do the opposite.

Burton's box office story

Since his feature-film directing debut in 1985, Tim Burton has turned his distinctively dark and edgy style into mainstream success. Here's a selective look at the writer-director's career. MCT

HITS

Pee-Wee's Big Adventure 1985

Burton's first feature was no blockbuster, but it remains a cult favorite.

Beetlejuice 1988

This comedy about a dead couple (Alec Baldwin, Geena Davis) seeking help from a devious ghost (Michael Keaton) marks the emergence of Burton's ghoulish but accessible style.

Batman 1989

This serious superhero film (Jack Nicholson played The Joker) set the standard for Christopher Nolan's movies 15 years later.

Edward Scissorhands 1990

The story of a black-clad, fright-wigged topiary trimmer (Johnny Depp) remains Burton's signature film.

The Nightmare Before Christmas 1993

Written and produced but not directed by Burton, "Nightmare" remains one of his best-loved efforts.

Alice in Wonderland 2010

It became the year's second-highest domestic earner, with $334 million.

MISSES

Batman Returns 1992

The sequel to "Batman" earned $162 million, but semi-cartoonish performances haven't aged well.

Ed Wood 1994

Critics liked Burton's affectionate tribute to real-life crackpot filmmaker Wood, but the public seemed less interested. It earned only $5.8 million.

Sleepy Hollow 1999

This period piece starring Depp as Ichabod Crane made—just barely—more than $100 million.

Planet of the Apes 2001

A disappointing reboot of the old sci-fi franchise.

Big Fish 2003

This heartfelt fantasy about a son and his story-spinning father earned a little less than $67 million.

Dark Shadows 2012

Depp and Eva Green crackled as dueling immortals in the horror comedy, but vampire fatigue kept it from cracking the $80-million mark.

Maggie Grace
in 'Taken 2'

The year's funniest thriller

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» mpais@tribune.com
» @mattpais

In "Taken," ex-spy Bryan (Liam Neeson) made single-handedly killing the Albanians who kidnapped his daughter Kim (Maggie Grace) look easy. That should've been a clue to leave this one-man wrecking crew alone. No, Murad (Rade Serbedzija) doesn't care that his son was a kidnapper who ruined the lives of innocent young women. He demands revenge on the boy's killer, launching a roughly 30-man operation to capture Bryan, his ex-wife, Lenore (Famke Janssen), and Kim during their trip to Istanbul.

In some of many unintentionally hilarious moments in this infinitely stupid sequel, Murad spends his downtime doing absolutely nothing. Really. When he receives calls about the progress of the mission, he's just sitting in a chair in an empty room, as if writers Luc Besson and Robert Mark Kamen preferred to write as little as possible.

They never should have started. That would have spared us from a henchman needlessly exclaiming to his colleague, "I shot some guy," after shooting some guy, or Bryan's quick series of commands to Lenore and Kim that no non-spy could ever remember and execute in a high-pressure setting. That includes ordering Kim to throw grenades in random places to help him gauge necessary locations, apparently because his method of memorizing sounds like boats and birds while hooded in a van clearly didn't pay off. When Kim asks where he is, Bryan doesn't say, "Three blocks away from birds."

The first "Taken" worked as a B-movie about a dad who would do anything for his daughter—which is easier when you have the ass-kicking skills of 100 people. In "Taken 2" director Olivier Megaton ("Colombiana") substitutes disposable action and characters that haven't learned anything from their past for the dangers of naive travel. (For some reason, we're also supposed to care if Kim passes her driver's test.) Kim misses dad's frantic calls because she's Skyping with her boyfriend (Luke Grimes of "Brothers and Sisters"). "Be casual, blend in," Bryan orders Kim, who then looks totally casual as an American girl in a bikini top frantically running barefoot around an Istanbul hotel.

Dad promises her he'll stop these faceless baddies from bothering their family again. As if she forgot about all the guys her old man just shot, Kim asks, "What are you going to do?" This should be the last time we see her learn the answer.

Zac Efron and Nicole Kidman in 'The Paperboy'

'Paperboy' just bad news

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» mpais@tribune.com
» @mattpais

What an odd title "The Paperboy" is for a movie with so little story.

Technically there's a plot, in which Jack (Zac Efron) helps his older brother Ward (Matthew McConaughey), a reporter for the Miami Times, investigate the possible innocence of convicted killer Hillary Van Wetter (John Cusack). There's just so little incident to "The Paperboy," adapted from the book by Pete Dexter (who co-wrote the script) and directed by co-writer Lee Daniels ("Precious") with the same gleeful enthusiasm for shameless filth he brought to his debut, "Shadowboxer."

If you haven't seen that film, characters played by Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Mo'Nique are dating, and characters played by Cuba Gooding Jr. and Helen Mirren have sex. And those are far from the movie's strangest, least convincing moments.

Daniels and Dexter seemingly forgot to detail the "Paperboy" investigation while focusing on the pointless framing device of Jack's family's maid Anita (Macy Gray) narrating the story—despite the fact that she's not around for most of the events she describes. There's also no consistency. Daniels happily depicts a laundry room sex-a-thon between Hillary and Charlotte (Nicole Kidman), a woman who fixates on inmates and this one in particular. Yet when Jack finally consummates his crush on Charlotte, Anita essentially says in voiceover, "OK, we've seen enough of that." Why, because of the actual emotion there, rather than something sleazy and regrettable?

The Paperboy

Even more so than "Killer Joe" (which also starred McConaughey), "The Paperboy" exploits without exploring. Jack's love never seems like anything more than lust. We never wonder about Hillary's guilt or innocence. Racism and homophobia appear without Daniels making any statement about them.

He's far more interested in urine (Charlotte pees on Jack after a jellyfish attack), semen (Charlotte seduces Hillary from a few feet away, and Daniels is sure to present the result in his pants) and gutted alligator intestines. The result is mostly boring trash that feels like what John Grisham would write on his laziest, horniest day.

About Cherry

"Why do you want to do porn?" What a question. For Angelina (Ashley Hinshaw of "Chronicle"), known as Cherry when she's naked on film, the answer's simple. She likes trying new things. She did a naked photo shoot once. No big deal.

The best thing about first-time director/co-writer Stephen Elliott's "About Cherry" is its refusal to go overboard. Angelina doesn't fall down a rabbit hole of dangerous people and drug addiction; she merely dates Francis (James Franco), who enjoys coke, maybe more than she knows.

In a subtle performance from Hinshaw, Angelina's an empowered woman who doesn't wear her troubles on the outside. She simply takes the opportunities she's given and does what she can to protect herself. She leaves behind her alcoholic mom (Lili Taylor) and younger sister in Long Beach to move to San Francisco with her best friend Andrew (Dev Patel), who not surprisingly finds difficulty in sharing one bedroom and one bed with his gorgeous pal.

If only Elliott (a Chicago native) engaged the fractures in the relationships. The complications between the somewhat passive Angelina and Francis and Andrew barely exist until they're major problems. The same goes for the developing issues between Angelina's director (Heather Graham, now behind the porn cameras 15 years after "Boogie Nights") and her girlfriend (Diane Farr).

Eventually, no one not in the porn industry can handle what their loved ones do when they're not around. Co-written by adult actress Lorelei Lee, "About Cherry" deflects these feelings rather than tracking them and offers only a mild examination of people's search for perfection in each other. The film comprises both usefully non-sexual business talk (yes, porn stars require contract negotiations) and steamy encounters, whether Angelina's practicing in the mirror or flirting with Francis at a bar. That generates a sensual world existing on top of the real one, where many people work non-ideal jobs simply to pay the bills.

That's provocative, even if "About Cherry" remains too tasteful to satisfyingly put the two worlds together.

The Oranges

R

You'd think mid-life crises and marital woes were invented yesterday by the way they're treated in the New Jersey-set "The Oranges," which indicts suburban routine while indulging only in formula itself.

Flirtation becomes forbidden passion between 24-year-old

Nina (Leighton Meester) and her dad's best friend, David (Hugh Laurie). This creates a fault line within the families/neighbors that "Entourage" director Julian Farino depicts as overly zany, perhaps because writers Ian Helfer and Jay Reiss have written a comedy with few jokes and maybe two laughs.

David's moody daughter Vanessa (Alia Shawkat) narrates the film with voiceover that minimizes an already shortsighted script. Vanessa's former friendship with Nina generates only a few obvious yelling matches. The return of Nina's cheating ex (Sam Rosen) inevitably leads to him calling David "pops." As David's wife, Catherine Keener explores a far more superficial version of her role in "Please Give," shouting, "It's not about being happy, David!" in a film that trivializes love, recovery and the ends justifying the means.

The dangers of both procrastination and impulsive behavior always count as a worthwhile message. At least "American Beauty," which hasn't aged well, allowed a wicked downward spiral from turbulent emotions and incestuous social lives. In "The Oranges," the repression and release arrive like a drizzle.

Dark Shadows

A vampire (Johnny Depp) wakes up to the weird world of the 1970s. Tim Burton's big-screen adaptation of the 1960s TV daytime drama has a vampire, witch and werewolf, but the film feels more like a Jekyll and Hyde production. Burton's created an odd structure. It's the patch of silliness in the middle that takes such a sharp turn that it makes the movie feel like two different stories sharing the same cinematic body. The film's not a total loss. The huge Gothic sets are amazing and Michelle Pfeiffer turns in a solid performance as the matriarch, Elizabeth Collins Stoddard. Depp's found another quirky character to embrace. And, the film features some great music from the '60s, including "Nights in White Satin."

Extras: Nine behind-the-scenes features include a look at transforming Depp into Barnabas, recreating the 1970s and profiles of the characters; also plus deleted scenes.

People Like Us

Chris Pine plays a man who must deal with a relative he didn't know existed. The film is an emotional roller coaster that stays on track through a tangle of huge highs and dramatic lows because of stand-out performances from Pine and Elizabeth Banks. Had either actor's work wobbled in the least, the ride would have come to a crashing halt. But their nearly flawless work is moving and powerful. This is by far the best work Banks has done, and it establishes her credentials for tough dramatic roles. It takes an accomplished actor to show toughness and weakness without making the character seem wishy-washy. Banks does this with power.

Magic City: The Complete First Season

Jeffrey Dean Morgan stars in this hot and steamy cable drama set in a lavish Miami hotel during the late '50s. Series creator Mitch Glazer folded his beautiful memories of growing up in Florida into the darker side of Miami life to create the series. His character lives, loves and lusts in a world that is the playground for the rich and famous, deals with the political turmoil going on in Cuba and is adjusting to social change. It's a winner from look to performances.

I would rather let Justin Bieber punch me in the face for a week than spend another two hours watching

"V/H/S."

Not only does this horror anthology feature the by now done-to-death found footage concept, it does so with constantly shaking and twitching video content. A series of short films in which people encounter serial killers and evil spirits may inspire nausea. I just felt motion sick.

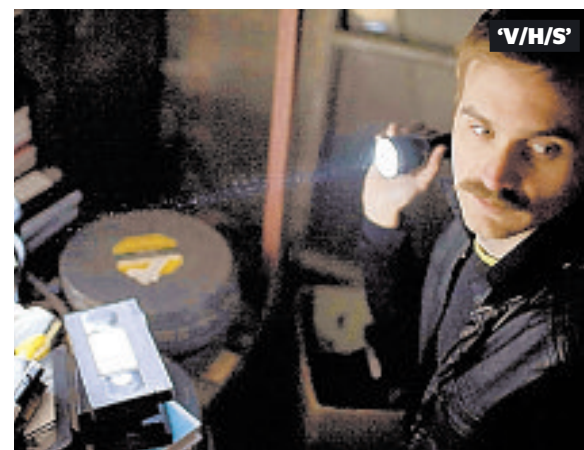

The mini-movies tackle concepts such as unknowingly picking up a demon at a bar, a couple whose hotel room is infiltrated during a road trip, a misguided excursion into the woods and a party at which no one normal appears to have shown up. The directors, including Ti West

R

("The Innkeepers") and Chicagoan Joe Swanberg ("Nights and Weekends"), may call these genre exercises; I call them horror with zero original ideas. They only show an appreciation for stupid characters and gratuitous nudity, as the male characters' inclination to sexually assault or trick women into exposing themselves on camera feels anything but innocent.

Some people complained earlier this year that "Project X" featured obnoxious people.

Those high school jokers are far more appealing than anyone here, with motivations and circumstances that are only mildly addressed. "V/H/S" has a few moments of tension but no real scares. I could not wait for it to end.

WHO'S THE SECRET AGENT?

There have been 22 official Bond films which, according to the-numbers.com, have amassed almost $5.1 billion at the box office worldwide. These seven men played the spy on the big screen.

PIERCE BROSNAN

Brosnan made four Bond movies.

ROGER MOORE

TV's "The Saint" had a 13-year stint as Bond, starring in seven adventures.

GEORGE LAZENBY

The Australian actor starred in only one Bond movie, "On Her Majesty's Secret Service."

DAVID NIVEN

Niven played the character in the spoof original "Casino Royale" in 1967.

TIMOTHY DALTON

The Brit starred in two Bond movies—"The Living Daylights" and "Licence To Kill."

SEAN CONNERY

The first film Bond, Connery starred in six Bond movies as well as the unofficial "Never Say Never Again" in 1983.

DANIEL CRAIG

"Skyfall" is Craig's third Bond film after "Casino Royale" and "Quantum of Solace."

Happy James Bond Day

Reuters

As a new documentary shows, the real story behind the James Bond film franchise is almost as dramatic as the 007 fantasies themselves, full of twists and turns, personality clashes, heroes, villains, beautiful women and narrow escapes.

"Everything or Nothing: The Untold Story of 007" premieres on the EPIX channel Friday, branded Global James Bond Day to mark 50 years since the world premiere of "Dr. No," which introduced author Ian Fleming's suave, sophisticated secret agent to the masses.

An anniversary Blu-ray box set, a swanky charity auction at Christie's and the new 007 fragrance for men are some of the ways in which Bond is being celebrated, underlining the lasting appeal of a character who has been constantly reinvented.

A measure of the fictional spy's popularity in Britain came during the opening ceremony of the London Olympics, when Bond actor Daniel Craig and Queen Elizabeth shared a short, comic and hugely popular scene filmed in Buckingham Palace.

Craig's first two outings on her majesty's secret service both earned around $600 million at the box office and "Skyfall," the 23rd official Bond film, hits theaters Nov. 9.

But the new documentary, directed by Steven Riley and featuring interviews with five of the six official Bond actors, underlines how the series was not always so secure.

"We've been through two bankruptcies of the studio, and we've been through various attacks by competing series so we've had our ups and downs," said long-time Bond producer Michael G. Wilson of the franchise's more serious setbacks.

"And of course we've also painted ourselves into a corner a number of times when you have to jump out of it."

"Everything or Nothing" director Riley agreed.

"Bond always lives to fight another day, and there were many threats," he said earlier this week at the film's London premiere. "I mean, how did Bond survive for ... 50 years? Everyone takes that very much for granted, but there were many obstacles in the way."

Wallflowers' new album jogs music memories

CNN

"Well, if it's a comeback you want, then get your hands raised," Jakob Dylan declares on the Wallflowers' first album in seven years, "Glad All Over."

So should we raise our hands and call the band's return a comeback? Despite the lyric, Dylan says no.

In New York on Monday, fresh off a performance for "Good Morning America"—which he jokingly called "Very Early Morning America"—the Wallflowers frontman said, "It's not like we were a band that broke up and got back together. We never broke up. We lost the plot a bit, and we needed a break, so we took one. We just needed time to find each other again."

Plus, it's good timing, given the coincidental and unrelated release of the movie "The Perks of Being a Wallflower."

"It can only be good, right?" Dylan asked. "To have the name Wallflowers out there again?"

The Wallflowers broke through in 1996 with the quadruple-platinum album "Bringing Down the Horse" before going on hiatus in 2007. During the band's time apart, Dylan recorded two solo albums—"Seeing Things" and "Women and Country"—while keyboardist Rami Jaffee took to the road with the Foo Fighters, giving them time to explore music they couldn't explore together. Reuniting gave them a new sense of direction, "like a reset button," Dylan said.

Road-testing the new material this summer by mixing it up with hits such as "6th Avenue Heartache," "One Headlight" and "The Difference" on a mini-tour has given the band a chance to see how audiences respond or even who that audience is anymore. If Dylan ever used to measure himself against his more famous father, Bob, that's nothing compared with his previous chart-topping success, which made him a rock star as well as a heartthrob.

"Things have changed since 'Bringing Down the Horse,'" he acknowledged. "MTV brought our music to a lot of kids, and even then, we wondered if we were reaching the right audience. But I'm lucky. I don't hate our old songs, and I don't mind playing them. I don't have that problem."

And with the new songs added, he said, "I don't think we sound like 1995 or 2002. It sounds like now, but filtered."

Content with where the band is now, the Wallflowers acknowledge the feeling in the new album title. Rob Thomas recently claimed that the Wallflowers were considering naming the new album "North," but Matchbox Twenty (orchestrating a comeback of their own?) beat them to it, a claim Dylan laughs about.

The Wallflowers

Nov. 2 at Park West; $30

Jakob Dylan of The Wallflowers
GETTY IMAGES

"That's a little bit of a misunderstanding," he clarified. "'North' was on a list of about 20 possibilities, but we chose 'Glad All Over' for its double meaning." Plus, "Glad All Over" has been used as titles for songs performed by the Beatles and the Dave Clark Five, so the musical legacy had appeal.

For now, the band—guitarist Stuart Mathis, bassist Greg Richling, new drummer Jack Irons and Jaffee—has enough cleverness to tide them over on "Glad," which includes such rousing new tracks as "Hospital for Sinners," "Misfits and Lovers" and "Reboot the Mission," featuring one of Dylan's guitar heroes, Mick Jones.

"The Clash left a big impact on me," Dylan said, "and I feel like we came all this way because of them. I got a Telecaster because of them."

Now that the Wallflowers are over their hiatus, Jaffee's other group, the aforementioned Foos, are going on theirs, as announced by Dave Grohl while performing in New York's Central Park recently. But don't blame the Wallflowers for stealing him back.

"I knew Rami first!" Dylan said. "And he's been able to manage juggling both bands before. So I hope we're not the cause."

The Killers return to Nevada roots

Reuters

A decade after The Killers' debut in the UK's indie-rock scene, the U.S. rock band has finally found its way back home to Las Vegas, drawing inspiration in the "city of sin" for the album "Battle Born."

The release, which debuted at No. 3 on the Billboard chart last week, was named after the motto on Nevada's state flag. By contrast, the band's 2004 British debut album "Hot Fuss," was strongly inspired by lead singer Brandon Flowers' love for Manchester, England, home of the bands that he admired such as New Order, Oasis, The Smiths and Joy Division.

Flowers, 31, the primary songwriter and stylish frontman known for his clean-cut look, dapper outfits and use of "guyliner" in the band's earlier days, said that while he had "fantasized" about England as a teenager, he quickly found himself an outsider after the band's first UK trip a decade ago.

"It was the first time any of us had left the country, we all had passports and we were excited, and we flew there, and very quickly I realized I don't really identify with these people," Flowers said in an interview. "Musically, we have a lot of inspiration from [England] but it made [me] really get introspective and try and figure out what I was personally, and that made me identify with my roots."

The singer is a practicing Mormon and appeared with his wife and children in a video promoting his faith, gaining a fan in U.S. Republican presidential contender Mitt Romney, who also is a Mormon. Flowers laughed off the political connection, saying "our music is for everybody."

"It doesn't bother us that one particular candidate likes us or if another doesn't," Flowers said. "For the most part, from [UK prime minister] David Cameron to Obama to Romney, everybody likes us."

Each of the band's follow-up albums—2006's "Sam's Town" and 2008's "Day And Age"—found more inspiration in the landscapes and people of Las Vegas.

In "Battle Born," Las Vegas became the glittering backdrop for the emotional heartaches and broken dreams that form the core of the band's songs. "Battle Born," the band's first album in four years, followed a hiatus in which Flowers released his solo album "Flamingo," and drummer Ronnie Vannucci and bassist Mark Stoermer pursued their own solo projects. Vannucci, 36, said the break helped the band come back together with fresh energy, which he believed was evident in the sound of the new album.

Fans also seem pleased at The Killers' return album, which has sold more than 15 million albums globally.

"We played in Krakow, Poland, about a month ago, and we were taken aback by the reception and the physicality and intensity of that gig," Flowers said. "Who ever expects to go play in Poland and have that kind of warm reception? It's pretty amazing."

ABOUT TIME?

N.W.A brings West Coast flavor to list of nominees for Rock Hall of Fame

Los Angeles Times

Randy Newman, Public Enemy, N.W.A, Donna Summer and—to the delight of progressive rock fans around the world—Rush are among the names on the final nominees list for 2013 induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, which for the first time will be announced at a ceremony set for next year in L.A.

Joining them are the Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Chic, Deep Purple, Heart, Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, Albert King, Kraftwerk, the Marvelettes, the Meters and Procol Harum.

The broad diversity of music styles represented by this year's round of nominees was noted by Joel Peresman, president and chief executive of the Rock Hall Foundation, in announcing the names.

"The definition of 'rock and roll' means different things to different people, but as broad as the classifications may be, they all share a common love of the music," Peresman said in a statement. "This year we again proudly put forth a fantastic array of groups and artists that span the entire genre that is 'rock and roll.'"

This year's round of inductions could remedy some longstanding gripes about the Hall's membership.

Newman has been long overlooked despite being one of the most critically acclaimed songwriters of the rock era. "I'm already bitter that I'm not in it," he told the Los Angeles Times mockingly in 1995. "It's a Hall of Shame."

Progressive-rock fans have long (and loudly) bemoaned the absence of Rush, Yes, Emerson, Lake & Palmer and other bands that specialized in expanding the structures of the rock song form in the 1970s and since. Genesis is the only band considered part of the prog-rock community to be included in the Hall of Fame, but its presence has as much to do with the breakout solo successes of members Peter Gabriel and Phil Collins as to its own legacy.

Likewise, disco fans have lobbied heavily for the inclusion of Summer into the Rock Hall, an effort that picked up the support of Elton John earlier this year after she was again among the nominees who didn't make the final cut.

Upon her death in May, John said, "That she has never been inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame is a total disgrace, especially when I see the second-rate talent that has been inducted." John famously campaigned successfully to get his friend and piano-playing influence Leon Russell inducted last year. Summer's death could make some voters more inclined to vote in her favor this year, and Deep Purple also has a posthumous factor at work this year—founding member Jon Lord died in July.

Inducting N.W.A or Public Enemy, or both, would bolster hip-hop's representation at the Hall. To date, the Beastie Boys, Run D.M.C. and Grandmaster Flash & the Furious Five are the only rap acts to be inducted. Compton, Calif.'s N.W.A is the first West Coast rap act to be nominated. Eligibility requirements state that an act's first recording must have been at least 25 years ago, which puts the eligibility for consideration this year at 1987.

Induction will be determined by votes of more than 600 artists, historians, critics and members of the music industry.

TOP SHOWS

Here are the top Chicago shows this weekend.

Tilly and the Wall

8 p.m. Sun. at Lincoln Hall. $16.

The beloved indie rockers just released "Heavy Mood," their first album in four years. Memorized the songs yet?

William Elliott Whitmore

9 p.m. Sun. at Bottom Lounge. $15.

The singer-songwriter will get your feet stomping, with or without booze. His songs seem to suggest that helps.

Kathleen Edwards

8 p.m. Sat. at Park West. $20.

The Canadian singer returns in support of her personal latest record, "Voyageur."

The Sheepdogs

9 p.m. Sat. at Double Door. $15.

I hold a grudge because they defeated Empires in the Rolling Stone competition to land an unsigned band on its cover, but they're still a decent rock band.

Victorian Halls

8:30 p.m. Sat. at Subterranean. $10.

The Chicagoans' rock could make you dizzy. Which isn't necessarily a bad thing.

'My ex is stealing my friends!'

Anna Pulley

» redeye@tribune.com
» @annapulley

Dear Anna,
My ex is stealing my friends! Two months ago I broke up with my boyfriend; let's call him "Sam." We had a lovely, loving relationship, but I ultimately didn't see it going anywhere. So after much deliberation and heartache, I broke it off. We met through a longtime mutual friend; let's call him "Frank." Frank is my ex's best friend and my best guy friend. Now Frank is guilt-tripping me about the breakup, telling me I'm no longer on his "nice list" and generally acting like I'm a bad guy. This is in jest, but also not. It feels a little "bros before hos." I also found out that I'm not invited to another mutual friend-of-my-ex's wedding, which I was previously told I would be invited to. My best guess is that it's because of the breakup. How do I maintain these mutual friendships post-breakup? How do I feel less crappy about it all? Is it fair that I'm feeling a little mad at my ex for stealing these friends?

—Nearly friendless

You're allowed to be a little mad. Of course you are. Breakups suck. No one walks away skipping to my lou, except maybe Lou, that jerk. But don't stay mad. Instead, say something. This will be easier in the "Did I get disinvited from your wedding?" situation. I suggest you send a quick email to the betrothed and ask for clarification. Sure, they might not write you back, but at least you tried. People are weird about weddings. They want as little drama as possible, so if they can avoid unpleasant ex run-ins, it's understandable that they might send you packing, as unfair as that sounds. If that's the case, then cut your losses, and consider yourself lucky you don't have to dance to "Funkytown" with the bride's weird uncle.

As to the "bros before hos" guy, that's a little trickier. As the dumper, it's commonly accepted that you have it "easier," regardless of whether this is true or not. Your mutual friend might feel like he needs to defend the dumpee because, by virtue of the situation, he needs defending. Not that I agree, but I've been known to do it too, especially if a recently dumped friend is really reeling from the heartache. "You know what?" I'd tell them, in between whiskey sours drank from a measuring cup, "That guy was a looooooser. Not only was he afraid of commitment, but he also didn't blink enough. He couldn't even commit to blinking!" And then we'd watch 12 hours of "CEO Wives."

Regardless of whether your mutual friend is "jesting," it's still bull[bleep], and you need to call him on it. He probably doesn't know it's hurting your feelings. Make him know: You're not a bad person for ending a relationship. People don't suddenly become two-dimensional after a breakup. It's not like, "She was so sweet, and then she became Ann Coulter" (assuming you didn't sleep with his brother or something, which doesn't seem very likely). Give your friend a curt pep talk. He's certainly broken up with people himself. How would he like to be judged for those decisions?

Breakups do create rifts in friend circles; it's unavoidable. But in a way, it's a necessary social mirror. You hold it up and it shows where your real friendships lie. This is important to see, even if it's painful.

SHOW STOPPER

Northwestern grad grabs spotlight in 'Boardwalk Empire'

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

■ cwwagner@tribune.com
■ @showpatrol

Meg Chambers Steedle was a little intimidated by her first starring TV role, but not because it required her to sing and dance.

The 2008 graduate of Northwestern University's School of Communications stars opposite Steve Buscemi on HBO's "Boardwalk Empire," which airs at 8 p.m.

Sundays. She plays Broadway hopeful Billie Kent, a freewheeling flapper who has ignited a youthful spark in Buscemi's bootlegging gangster Nucky Thompson.

"Oh my gosh, it was terrifying at first just because I've looked up to him for so long," she told me during a recent trip to Chicago. "And then my first scene in the show I was grabbing a drink from Steve Buscemi and throwing it back. I choked a hundred times!"

"But he also was just so welcoming and ... made me feel like part of the family."

Stealing Buscemi's drinks, it turns out, hasn't been the most awkward part of the job. With Nucky's marriage to Margaret Schroeder simply a front, he spends a lot of time in Billie's New York apartment—under the sheets. Steedle was a little apprehensive to do the nudity, but said it feels right for the character and that Buscemi and the crew have made her feel safe when filming the scenes.

She also admits that filming sexy scenes with Buscemi hasn't been as odd as fans might think. "He is actually attractive to me," she said, laughing. "He is! I know he ... loves his look as being quirky; he will be the first one to say it. But I guess when you're playing opposite someone it's just natural to find an attraction to them, but yeah, I think he's a handsome guy if you get up close."

The North Carolina native guest starred on ABC's "Body of Proof" last season and had been successful doing regional theater outside New York before landing the "Boardwalk" role—which seemed tailor-made for the musical theater geek who has played Sally Bowles in "Cabaret" at Northwestern.

"It's funny because when I was talking to the writers of this show they were saying, 'We're thinking kind of like a Sally Bowles meets Holly Golightly from "Breakfast at Tiffany's,'" she said. "I was like, 'Yes, yes, yes! Right on board!'"

While living in Evanston, Steedle decided to complement her theatrical training with on-camera classes, so she took the "I" to downtown Chicago to work with acting coach Oksana Fedunyszyn and study at Act One Studios. Now, she said with a laugh, her studies continue "with Steve Buscemi as my teacher."

"I'm having a great time and I do feel really blessed," she said. "They're just the best in the business I think, it's fair to say. I feel like I'm learning from the best and you can't pay for that kind of education, so I'm grateful."

PERSONALITY TEST

I asked Meg Chambers Steedle some personal questions.

Favorite Broadway shows

I'll go with two—Bernadette Peters in "Annie Get your Gun," fell in love with her. I saw Sutton Foster in "Thoroughly Modern Millie" and I ... just loved it.

Favorite show tunes

Well I'm biased, but "Cabaret." I love that soundtrack. ... I just I love how it feels almost like a play that has music incorporated into it. I think the emotion really comes through in the songs.

Favorite artists

I love Natasha Beddingfield, Charlotte Martin, Sara Bareilles, then put a little bit of Chris Brown on top, a little Top 40 hits and I'm good to go.

Favorite TV shows

I love the period dramas. I love "The Tudors" and "Downton Abbey" and I just love propelling myself into a different scene and a different time period and then seeing the drama between relationships.

Favorite movies

I'd have to say "Newsies." I sound like such a musical theater geek. "Newsies" is my favorite and "Singing in the Rain." Oh my gosh, I'm a slave to my musical background.

King Tut or Cleopatra?

Cleopatra, she killed it. She's hot.

Something people don't know about you

I can one-hand clap.

DIRTY JOB

This movie's so raunchy, we can't even show you the trailer

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

If you hadn't heard of "Movie 43," out Jan. 25, before this week, that's about to change in a big way. A red band trailer for the flick was released Wednesday, and it might give "The Aristocrats" a run for its money. The concept: A-list stars get into raunchy scenarios. Sound great? See if you can match the off-color lines—well, the ones we could print—from the preview to the stars who uttered them. You might get a few surprises. "Hey guys! Come check out this kid's weird pubes!"

"He gave you a foot and a half [bleep], dribble with that!"

"It's your HPV, Veronica. I'm just carrying it."

"Will you poop on me?"

"You dropped your books, [bleep] face."

HEY, GIRLS

Christina Aguilera met Secretary of State Hilary Clinton on Wednesday at the McGovern Awards in Washington, D.C., where Xtiina was honored for her help fighting global hunger. This picture happened. What more can we say?

"That is was one of the coolest things I've ever done. It is the day I think I became a man."

—Zac Efron, on Thursday's "Ellen DeGeneres Show," describing a scene from "The Paperboy" in which he improvised a dance in the rain with Nicole Kidman, according to usatoday.com. That's, uh, not what we thought that quote would be about, but good for Zac!

THE DIGIT

$127,000

That's the estimated value of the jewelry taken from Julianne Moore's New York home, according to a police report filed Monday. The Associated Press reports. Police said they are investigating.

Breakup and makeup?

What is going on here? Chris Brown told E! he called it quits with girlfriend Karrueche Tran because he doesn't "want to see her hurt over my friendship with Rihanna." Brown and Rihanna were spotted together at a New York nightclub Tuesday and at a Jay-Z concert Wednesday. Oh, boy.

Sexy times

David Beckham's chiseled physique was the highlight of a celebrity homes tour Tuesday in Beverly Hills, Calif. The soccer superstar was seen in his undies as the van drove by, people.com reported, because he was shooting an underwear ad for his H&M brand.

Rumor control

Back off! In a Who magazine interview, Nicole Kidman addresses the rumor that she consulted with Tom Cruise's more recent ex, Katie Holmes, before Holmes filed for divorce. "I never spoke to her," Kidman said. "I wish all of them well, but I was not involved in any of that."
